

Carolyn Osadczuk is running for the ECA Board to represent the voices of builders across the spectrum, foster meaningful industry connections, and help shape the future of construction in Edmonton through action and inclusion.

She is the Manager of Special Projects at PCL Construction, where she leads a team focused on fast-paced, customized builds across Edmonton's Buildings and Civil district. Over her 22-year career at PCL, Carolyn has built projects of all sizes and across every sector, from bridges and hospitals to recreational centres, hotels, and educational institutions.

She began her journey as a field engineer onsite and progressed through roles in estimating and project management before taking on her current leadership position. This breadth of experience has given her a comprehensive understanding of the construction lifecycle and the diverse needs of clients and communities. Carolyn brings a "local contractor" mindset to a large general contractor, allowing her to connect meaningfully with builders of all sizes.

As the first woman to hold her role at PCL in Edmonton, Carolyn has championed mentorship and designed a sponsorship model to elevate emerging women leaders in construction. Her advocacy continues through involvement with WomenBuild, CAWIC, and five years on the ECA's YBG Leadership Team. She also contributes to the Downtown Revitalization Coalition, helping shape a vibrant future for downtown Edmonton.

Outside of work, she's a proud mom of three and brings the same energy to the hockey arena as she does to the jobsite.
